

I attended the hearing in Atlanta on the proposed changes that are to take place concerning FCC regulations on June 2. I raise my voice with many others to implore the FCC to give the citizens of this country the time necessary to understand these changes. Freedom of speech and the press are vital to a thriving democracy. We must truly understand the effects the loosening of regulations will have on one of our most precious freedoms.

I ask the FCC to carry out its duty to the American people by allowing a true comment period and to act in the best interest of the people of the United States, not in the perceived best interest of the corporations.
